

THE COMMITTEE LETTER

June 2024

Between the so-called “national Sovereignty” and Authoritarianism: Kaïs Saïed's Tunisia

In the arcane of Tunisian power, one enigma persists: Kaïs Saïed. Since his election in 2019, he has generated controversy and concern. But while Tunisians yearn for real change, Saïed's actions have often belied his populist rhetoric, casting doubt on his legitimacy and ability to govern. Worse still, his actions in power have often contradicted his speeches, particularly when it comes to his positions on sensitive issues such as national sovereignty and Palestine. His actions have shown his true face.

READ THE ARTICLE

Rise of the far right: Tunisian associations warn of risks to the rights of Tunisians and migrants

Following the failure of governments to resolve the growing economic and social crises, right-wing and far-right parties have won the majority of votes in a significant number of European countries.

READ THE ARTICLE

Biometric passports and the personal data challenge : What if Big Brother wants to watch you ?

Last March, the "Assembly of People's Representatives" passed a bill introducing biometric passports and identity cards.

READ THE ARTICLE

Two years have passed since the unfair dismissal of the judges. A stark illustration of the crisis of justice in Tunisia.

Two years have passed since the President of the Republic dismissed 57 judges and overruled the Administrative Court's ruling in favor of 49 of them, a ruling that acquitted them of the charges and refuted all the allegations made against them.

READ THE ARTICLE

The Tunisian regime intensifies its repression. The heavy-handed intervention against the "House of Lawyers", a dangerous turning point

READ THE RELEASE

Call: "Five hours for freedoms and human rights in the Maghreb".

More than ever, the declaration dated March 29, 2023 - "The regimes of the Greater Maghreb converge only to repress their peoples" - is a clear reminder of the importance of the Maghreb.

READ THE CALL

Version Française

النسخة العربية

CRLDHT
21ter rue voltaire
75009 Paris

crl@dht@proton.me
+33 (0)1 23 45 67 89

Privacy
Imprint
Unsubscribe